

Streetcar Development's new infill project, The Carlaw, will be home to an independent theatre company.

Crow's Theatre finds a new home

ive theatre will take centre stage at Streetcar Development's latest infill project, The Carlaw in Leslieville, with the addition of Crow's Theatre.

The theatre has staged multiple-award-winning productions but even after three decades as one of Canada's most acclaimed independent theatres, it has yet to find a permanent home. Until now.

Launching in 2015, Crow's Theatre will take up permanent residence in a state-of-the-art facility on the ground floor at The Carlaw.

The Carlaw's striking architecture, designed by TACT Architecture Inc., and Crow's new home, which will be designed by the award-winning Toronto firm DTAH Architects (responsible for the Evergreen Brickworks), are shaping up to be a gorgeous combination.
