Streetcar unveils The Taylor, its newest addition to the Leslieville neighbourhood

November 28, 2013

Streetcar Developments is officially expanding its collection of boutique loft properties with the launch of The Taylor this spring, a new community nestled in the Toronto's Leslieville neighbourhood.

Located at 1220 Dundas Street East, the sleek block of homes is situated in one of Toronto's most artistic and transit-friendly neighbourhoods. Not only is it one of the top brunch destinations in the city, you'll be surrounded by a variety of trendy restaurants, fair trade coffee shops and popular pubs.

Streetcar, combined with the artistic finesse of TACT Architecture, is slowly transforming the area into even more of a cultural hub. The Carlaw, another Streetcar project currently under construction, is just next door and will soon house Crow's Theatre.

When you want to explore the city, just jump on a streetcar and you'll be downtown in minutes. You're also a short distance from the lake and a variety of community parks and trails. Heading out of town for the weekend? The Taylor will provide easy access to the DVP and the Gardiner.

The set of 96 contemporary lofts and a collection of townhomes also reflects the vibrant neighbourhood it's situated in, boasting exposed-concrete ceilings and frosted-glass sliding doors. Every suite also includes plenty of storage space (think walk-in closets) and a spacious terrace or balcony.

If you're not yet an avid cook, you'll quickly become one. The kitchen will feature quartz countertops, porcelain tile backsplashes and stainless steel sinks.
